GROUNDWATER WITHDRAWAL DATA SUMMARY FOR ILLINOIS NPDES PERMITS

James R. Kirk

INTRODUCTION

Groundwater in Illinois is the source of water for approximately 1750 public water supply systems. Also, it is a major source of water for industry, agriculture, and almost all private domestic water supply systems in the state. In 1978, an estimated 945 million gallons per day of groundwater were withdrawn in Illinois (Kirk et al., 1979).

Most groundwater withdrawn is discharged to Illinois streams after use. The quantity discharged needs to be established to provide a data base for further studies of water quality and water resource management. Future water quality projects will study the influence of groundwater quality on effluent quality and, in turn, the impact of effluent quality on receiving stream water quality.

The purpose of this study was to compile groundwater withdrawals for approximately 2800 facilities listed by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency as sources of point discharge. The groundwater withdrawals were estimated from the Water Surveys' Hydrologic Files and Illinois Water Use Data Base. The results are presented as both machine tabulations and maps.

Acknowledgements

The author wishes to thank Jacquelyn Jarboe, Assistant Supportive Scientist, Illinois State Water Survey, for her invaluable assistance in accessing and reformatting the machine-readable data bases. Bruce Butler, Research Assistant, Illinois State Water Survey, assisted in telephone data surveys and dischargers locations. Mark Hodson, Mark Norton, Julie Paschen, and Wenda Soltis, students at the University of Illinois, assisted in data collection, location of dischargers, plotting and data tabulation, and well records search. This report was prepared under the general direction of James P. Gibb, Head, Groundwater Section, and Ellis W. Sanderson, Engineer, Illinois State Water Survey. The artwork was prepared by William Motherway and John Brother.

DESCRIPTION OF DATA BASES

Wastewater Discharge and Treatment Waste Inventory Data Base

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has maintained its Wastewater Discharge and Treatment Waste Inventory Data Base since 1973. Records for over 4000 individual dischargers have been placed in a machine readable storage and retrieval system. These records include data for public wastewater dischargers, industrial-commercial wastewater dischargers, and feedlot dischargers. Data elements include ownership, type of dischargers, stream basin of discharge, county of discharge, and NPDES permit details. The fixed format indicates many more data elements will be added when the data base is complete.

Hydrologic Files

The Illinois State Water Survey has been maintaining the Hydrologic Files since the 1890's. Over 12,000 well records, pump tests, and water analyses were added during 1979. This data base is stored in file cabinets and organized by the legal description of the well locations. These files include data for public water supply wells, industrial wells, private domestic wells, and irrigation wells. Data elements include well logs, details of well construction, well ownership, location (to the township, section), and mineral analysis.

The information in the data base is a collection of data from the Illinois Department of Public Health, Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, Illinois State Water Survey, and well drillers over a period of 90 years. In addition to the variations in reporting forms and agency emphasis, the number of individuals and procedural changes have contributed to problems and complications in the data base.

Illinois Water Use Data Base

The State Water Survey started the Illinois Water Use Data Base as part of a continuing cooperative program with the U.S. Geological Survey in 1978. Records of over 10,000 individual annual water withdrawals (1978 and 1979) have been placed in machine-readable storage. These records include data for public water supply systems, industrial water use (including mining and power production), rural water use, and fish and wildlife management areas water use. Data elements include ownership, source of withdrawal, location of withdrawal (township, section), and annual quantity of withdrawal.

When totally operational, the Illinois Water Use Data Base will document water withdrawals by individual well and aquifer system or intake structure. This information will be invaluable in coordinating the management of water resources, expediting the exchange of water use information, and will complement resource research and studies with the capability of rapidly aggregating various regional water use patterns.

Other Data Needs

With any large data base, there are limitations and problems with inaccuracies, omissions, and errors. To fill the void in the data bases, other data were collected from direct mail questionnaires and telephone surveys.

OTHER STUDIES

Since the early 1940's, the Illinois State Water Survey has become increasingly involved in evaluating the use of water resources of Illinois. Most previous reports have emphasized the effect of groundwater discharge on stream low flows and withdrawals from groundwater systems. Three published reports discussing the effect of groundwater discharge on streams in Illinois are: Bulletin 57 (Singh and Stall, 1973.), Reports of Investigation 48 (Walton, 1965.), and Contract Report 230 (Gibb and O'Hearn, 1980.). Another recently completed report, Contract Report 246 (O'Hearn and Gibb, 1980), updates groundwater contributions to base flows of surface streams.

PRESENT STUDY

The purpose of this study is to verify the source of water for about 2800 facilities, which are listed as point dischargers by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, and compile groundwater withdrawals for those using groundwater. During this study, the following assumptions and exclusions have been used:

1. All discharge for public water systems is through the municipal wastewater treatment plant.
2. Facilities purchasing water and discharging into the same stream as their source are shown as one discharge.

3. Facilities having their own wells, but no discharge permit, are assumed to use municipal wastewater treatment.
4. Facilities which discharge directly to the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers are excluded.
5. Facilities classified as mines, public water treatment plants, feedlots, and solid waste disposal sites are excluded.
6. Facilities classified as motels, campgrounds, schools, mobile home parks, and restaurants which did not have water withdrawal data are estimated based on capacity or enrollment (USEPA, 1973).
7. Facilities which are closed or could not be found via the U.S. Postal Service or telephone companies are excluded.

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency provided a computer tape of its Wastewater Discharge and Treatment Waste Inventory Data Base.

Approximately 2800 facilities listed as discharging to streams were sorted from the tape. These facilities were located in the Illinois Water Use Data Base to determine their source of water. Three classes of facilities were delineated: 1) facilities using surface water, 2) facilities using groundwater, and 3) facilities whose source of water was unknown.

Addresses provided in the Wastewater Discharge and Treatment Waste Inventory Data Base were used to mail questionnaires to those whose source and/or quantity of groundwater withdrawal was unknown. The non-returns were followed up by second mailings and telephone calls. The inventoried groundwater withdrawals for each facility were entered into a temporary data base established for this project.

The locations of the facilities were plotted on one set of mylar prints of the U.S. Army 2 degree maps covering the state of Illinois (Aurora, Belleville, Burlington, Chicago, Danville, Davenport, Decatur, Dubuque, Indianapolis, Paducah, Peoria, Quincy, Racine, Rockford, St. Louis, and Vincennes) which were provided by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. The machine-readable data set (provided IEPA) and map keys (in the back of this report) include the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency Basin Code, FIPS County Code, Facility Name, ID Control Number, and Zip Code, along with the average quantity of groundwater (in gallons per day-GPD) that the facility or group of facilities withdraw. The quantity of withdrawal is not necessarily the amount of groundwater discharged by these facilities. In most cases, the withdrawal represents the maximum quantity of groundwater discharged.

RECOMMENDATIONS

This study should be expanded to better define the portion of groundwater withdrawals that contributes to the quantity and quality of facility waste water discharges by:

1. Estimating groundwater withdrawals by all point dischargers
2. Determining the aquifer system tapped for withdrawals
3. Estimating the quantity of groundwater in the effluent
4. Estimating groundwater infiltration to wastewater collection systems

Results of this study indicate the need for:

1. Annually updated and accurate information about NPDES permit holders
2. Development of a more comprehensive basin code
